Good Morning Espacio Arcade
calle Serpis 68
Valencia, Spain.

Dear Hiring, jobs@nospoonlab.com, since I was younger, I have always been playing and enjoying videogames and even thinking how I would make my own or just thinking of cool ideas or mechanics that would be fun to have in certain games. I am applying to this "Videogame programmer" job because since the beginning I have always wanted to work in something related to the videogame industry because it is the job in where I would be more passionate about and not just have to work for a salary, I wanted since the beginning a job that connected with myself.

At the moment, I haven't made a big progress in videogame programming knowledge, because I'm still learning the basics and playing a lot of different videogames in my freetime to have a big number of inspirations and knowledge about what every player likes when it comes to play his/her favorite videogame (I have played a big number of them and have many references when it comes to planning new games and what players would like at the moment because I'm one of them of course).

I'm planning to start learning Unity and C# more in depth in this year's summer, (Ignoring the micro-projects I did in the past from tutorials in a hurry) because in my current classes we are only learning Java and the basics of programming as I mentioned before. So this summer I'll try to make small videogame projects and not focus only on a big one to be able to be more versatile and in that way making it easier to fit in companies like yours.

I am open and very interested in learning a lot about videogames and it's programming from your actual team and to be able to offer my crazy ideas if possible. Thank you for taking your time in reading my letter and I hope your business goes through well.

To contact me you can email me back or call me preferably from 7:00 Am to 4:00 Pm .

Sincerely,
Lucas Varela Negro
